CHEF'S NOTES

Using canned beans is the trick to making this dish come together in a hurry for a stress-free weeknight dinner. They are an inexpensive shelf-stable item to keep stocked in your pantry for adding quick plant-powered protein and fiber to any meal.

Adjust the heat level to your preference by adding extra cayenne pepper.

DIRECTIONS

1. Gather all necessary equipment and ingredients.
2. In a medium sauce pot, heat the oil over medium heat. Once hot, add in the onions and stir occasionally, until translucent and begin to brown slightly, about 2-4 minutes.
3. Add the bell pepper and then the celery to the pan, continuing to sauté until the vegetables are soft and begin to brown, about 2 minutes. Add the garlic and continue to sauté until the garlic is fragrant, another 30-60 seconds.

4. Add the pork tasso OR smoked paprika, bay leaf, thyme, Creole seasoning, salt, pepper, and optional cayenne to the pot. Stir until the spices are well combined. Let the spices heat, coat the vegetables, and become aromatic, about 1-2 minutes.
5. Add the drained and rinsed beans and vegetable stock (or water) to the pot and stir well to combine. Once the beans begin to bubble, reduce the heat to medium-low. Simmer for 15-20 minutes, stirring occasionally.
6. Add the hot sauce to the pot. If a creamier texture is desired, use a whisk or potato masher to mash the beans. Serve over rice and topped with sliced green onions.
